

The United States respectfully suggests that this Court should await the Court of Appeals' decision before taking further action in this matter. The Court of Appeals has before it the issue of whether this Court should have granted the motion to enter the proposed final judgment. If the Court of Appeals agrees with the position of the United States, it will remand with directions to this Court to enter the proposed final judgment. If it agrees partially with the United States, it will remand with directions concerning the scope and nature of further proceedings in this manner. If it disagrees with the United States entirely, it will affirm this Court's order. The nature of the Court of Appeals' decision, therefore, will decisively shape the nature of future proceedings in this Court. We respectfully move that, in these circumstances, the appropriate course of action for this Court is to postpone the status conference now scheduled on March 16, 1995.

Respectfully submitted.
